

Think you're leading a team?

Here's a test:

You will know that the team you are leading is cohesive and unified when its individual members are willing to openly confront each other and hold each other accountable for failures and shortcomings. Moreover, once confronted openly, team members accept accountability and responsibility for their failures, learn from them, and move forward.